Today's construction contractor understands that assessing and controlling risk is the first step toward preventing accidents and injuries that can affect their bottom line. The most effective approach is to be both proactive and reactive. Contractual risk transfer is a tool to apportion risk for injury and damages to the party best able to manage the exposure.

This seminar, brought to you by Zurich Services Corporation, is designed to assist owners, project managers and safety professionals in understanding the risk factors and controls affecting contractual risk transfer. During this half-day session, you will learn, along with other safety-minded contractors, how to work more effectively with contracting parties to assign risks to manage your company's exposure.

By the end of the program, you will be able to:

- Detail concepts of contractual liability to clarify what you need to know and why.
- Understand different types of insurance and insurance documents.
- Explain how implementing subcontractor controls can and will ultimately reduce your GL exposures.

Implementing key best practices within your organization is critical to ensuring that your corporate programs protect your employees and your business, so don't miss your chance to attend.

All seminars are from 8:30 a.m. – 12:00 p.m. Complimentary lunch will be available. Seating is limited, so make your reservations early.
